COMMENTS

1. What were the strongest points of the TA in discussion section or office hours?

- always ready to help students, great communicator despite possible lacking in knowledge of topic.
- Andrew is a very intelligent and hard-working PhD candidate. Even though the materials for this course was well out of his expertise, it was very evident that he worked hard to be as informative as possible. He also gave us many resources to work with.
- Andrew made the most out of his TA experience even though he didn't have much choice in which class he TA'd and he tried to help as best as he could. He tried to help with the homework when he could.
- Arguably one of the best TAs that I ever have. Andrew is friendly and always want to help us succeed in the class. He would hold out extra office hours even though he don't have too. Andrew is an amazing TA and I am glad that he was my TA.
- came prepared with notes and listened to the student's needs
- clear explanation for things i did not understand, very patient and kind
- Everything
- He clarified his presentations in his discussions sections
- He goes over similar problems for the exam and goes over midterm sample.
- He helped us find easier ways to solve things than the professor used.
- He made it tailored to what the students actually needed help with
- He was able to integrate course material and answer students questions and concerns He also took into account students opinions and made clear presentations to make it easier for us to understand the concepts
- He was extremely helpful and gave different ways to do things
- He was very clear and concise with his instruction.
- how he taught the materials. he would find any other way to make the students understand
- I admire Andrew's effort in this course. Even though he is not well versed in business forecasting, I appreciate the fact that he takes the time to sit in lecture and ask for the professor to clarify when she is confusing.
- I liked how he was honest about not asking to be a TA for this course lmaoooo he didn't even know how to use the software beforehand poor man.
- Knowledgable.
- Knowledge of the material and showing examples
- n/a
- N/A
- N/a
- No idea. Never went.
- Put in a lot of effort for a class he was unfamiliar with, helped with certain HW or midterm reviews
- TA is willing to explain homework problems in details along with his own examples to help us understand important concepts
- TA was always willing to help out during discussion and in emails. Gave us helpful tips for tests and encouraged us to practice problems to understand class better.
- Teaching us tips and tricks that the Professor didn't go through were helpful. Presentations were clear and concise
- the TA actively answer students' question
- This man didnt know a lot going into the class, but once he figured it out he really helped with the content. He made confusing concepts easier to understand.
- This TA was SO helpful. I love this guy, always responsive to emails, and willing to meet with students. He was very approachable, and resourceful. This guy man, so cute too (in a cute baby way), looks like a cute little white wabbit.

- Took time to learn material
 - Very organized and willing to help/teach
 - Well prepared for discussion sections Very helpful and nice
 - Your different perspective of the same material was helpful and I especially appreciated how much information you provided.

2. Do you have any recommendations for your TA that would help that person be a more effective TA in the future?
- he is the best!
 - I do not consider him a bad TA, however, this shouldnt have been a course that he was assigned to because he did not know the material. He was learning the material just like us as the professor taught us. In my opinion, going to discussions, we hope that our TA can help us with the course materials expecting and believing that the TA is familiar with it or at least more familiar than us. I sometimes found going to discussion a waste of time. Not a problem of the TA, I just think that the course was not a fit for him.
 - It is clearly evident that he is knowledgeable, but his obsession with being the most precise with his word choices as he can makes his explanations extremely long and convoluted at times. Though that type of communication might be fruitful with his PhD colleagues, the average unmotivated undergrads will not be able to follow what he is trying to say. Being short and straight to the point with his claims and explanations would benefit him for being a TA in his future classes. Thanks Andrew!
 - I would be wary of interrupting the instructor in front of students - it disrupts the class and could effect student's opinions of her authority.
 - I would recommend being more sure about whether his directions are correct in discussion or send out emails about his mistakes if there are any.
 - I would say to just interpret the way you want to do it and teach it to the students if you think its easier than originally taught.
 - Keep it up, hopefully you can land the class you want next quarter
 - Maybe do the survey you did in the middle of the quarter like week 3 instead
 - Maybe focus more on the test-preparation and what students need to do instead of introducing more advanced knowledge.

 - No recommendations
 - Not at all. Funny guy!
 - nothing
 - Not much he is a pro
 - One thing that sucked, was that he made rules as to what you could email him about. Overall, I think he did a pretty good job!
 - Please go over material thoroughly. The fact that I dint show up afterwards to the discussion sections, because he was not able to clear my doubts, also did not respond to my email, for the final.

- Probably should do more emphasis on the multiplier effect
- Start to help students through email a bit more.
- TA expressed disappointment in his placement in this course and therefore lacked information on the course and programs needed in the course. If the TA could show more enthusiasm, students will be more likely to study harder. Expressing disappointment with his placement of the current course in the first discussion section should not occur ever again.
- the TA is not organized for the discussion section. Many classmates get confused.
- Worst TA for this class ever. He didn't even want to teach it, and doesn't care about the course.
